12pm-1pm

What are Core Values, and why are they important?

Led by Sharon Sessions, Professor of Physics and Physics Department Chair

Core values can be a valuable tool for navigating critical decisions in personal life or as a department or organization. They drive our behavior and form our beliefs. For academic departments, identifying and sharing Core Values can be a valuable opportunity to attract students or colleagues. I'll guide you through a process for identifying personal core values that can be adopted for a department or organization. I'll also share how I've used core values to navigate personal and career choices, as well as how this tool can help students.

Join us as Sharon Sessions leads a conversation about core values and guides us in a hands-on activity.
